TREASURE ISLE FAIR SITE IS NOW ONE YEAR OLD

First Anniversary Of Start Of Work Finds Project Near Completion

Treasure Island, the 400 acre man made site of the 1939 Golden Gate International Exposition on San Francsco bay, began its second year of growth this week.

The first anniversary of the beginning of work finds the island more than three-quarters complete, with three steel buildings already under way.

Work was begun February 11, 1936, when a fleet of dredges began filling in land northeast of Yerba Buena island. The end of work the first year found the fill about 80 per cent complete, with the seawall 83 per cent complete. The entire island will be finished by August 1.

BUILDINGS BEGUN

Buildings, the exotic exposition palaces of the future, are already going up. Steel girders are in place for the east and west hangars of the permanent airport buildings. The foundations are being laid for a terminal. The hangars will cost $400,000 each and the terminal $800,000. They will be used during the Exposition, from February 18 to December 2, 1939, as exhbit buildings, but after

DREAM OF OUR PIONEERS NEAR TO COMPLETION

Golden Gate Bridge, Greatest Suspension In the World, To Be Open May 21

Another dream of California pioneers of a century ago will be fulfilled with the opening of the greatest suspension bridge in the world—the Golden Gate bridge—which will occur May 21, less than four months away.

That date will be a significant and historcal one to the residents of the Pacific Coast, for the opening of this bridge will close the last remaining gap on the coast side path that leads from Canada to the Mexican border.

As everyone who reads the news columns of the papers these days will know, the bay cities are planning a monster jubilee for this occasion, a celebration which will rival that held last year when the San Francisco - Oakland bridge was opened to traffic. Uncle Sam's fleet will participate in this monster event, with speech making, fireworks, parade and a monster crowd of visitors from here, there any everywhere.

Voters League Soon To Give Gala Dance

The Bayshore Voters League is making extensive preparations to hold a grand Saint Patrick's dance, Saturday evening, March 20. It is expected that this will be one of the finest affars ever held in the community.

Every detail is at present being given consideration to insure the enjoyment of all those who attend this function. The sponsoring committee is spending every effort to make the dance the outstanding event of this season.

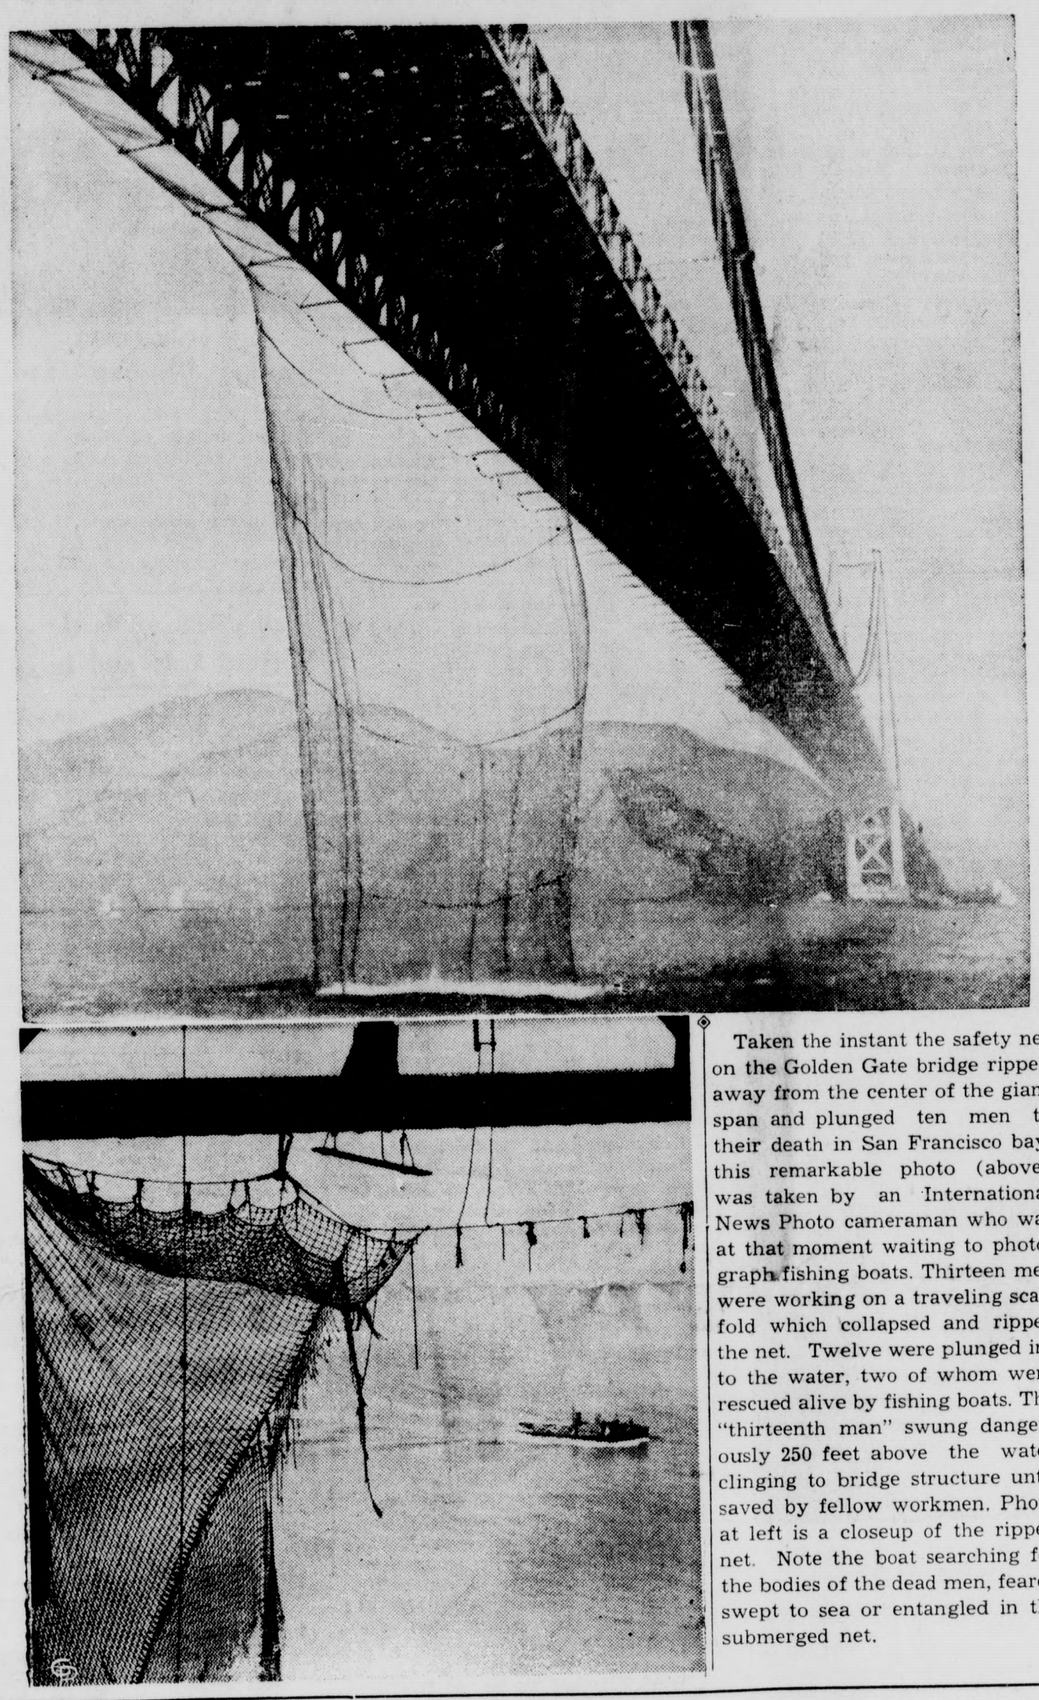
Music is to be furnished by Mel Lyons and his dance orchestra, which is well known throughout the bay area. Lyons is a popular artist to KPO and KFRC listeners.

San Mateo Jaysee In Basketball Race

San Mateo Junior College basketball players meet the league leading Modesto Jajsee in two games today and tomorrow in the Matean gym San Mateo is now tied with San Francisco jaysee for second place, and a win over Modesto will throw the peninsula squad up into striking distance of the conference title.

San Mateo defeated Menlo jaysee in the last two league games played, 47-36 and 58-46.

Ten Die When Golden Gate Bridge Safety Net Breaks



Taken the instant the safety net on the Golden Gate bridge ripped away from the center of the giant span and plunged ten men to their death in San Francisco bay, this remarkable photo (above) was taken by an International News Photo cameraman who was at that moment waiting to photograph fishing boats. Thirteen men were working on a traveling scaffold which collapsed and ripped the net. Twelve were plunged into the water, two of whom were rescued alive by fishing boats. The "thirteenth man" swung dangerously 250 feet above the water clinging to bridge structure until saved by fellow workmen. Photo at left is a closeup of the ripped net. Note the boat searching for the bodies of the dead men, feared swept to sea or entangled in the submerged net.

TEN MEN DEAD AND TWO INJURED AS SCAFFOLD BREAKS ON GOLDEN GATE SPAN AND SAFETY NET FAILS

Two Workers Are Rescued, One Body Is Recovered And Tide Carries Seven To Sea

All hopes for a safety record on the Golden Gate Bridge construction were shattered, Wednesday of this week, when ten workmen plunged 250 feet to their death following the collapse of an "unapproved" traveling scaffold which ripped down the protective life net.

One body was recovered, the others were sought by searching parties in boats and planes.

Two more members of the crew, who plunged with the ten ton scaffolding and safety net into the water, were rescued. They were seriously injured.

Twelve men fell with the debris and net.

A thirteenth man was saved by clinging to the lower bridge beams, bridge headquarters announced.

The tragedy, first major accident on the $35,000,000 structure in which workmen have fallen to the water, came when scaffolding, used to strip paving forms from under the bridge floor, collapsed.

Timothy A. Reardon, state director of industrial relatons, said the traveling scaffold, put in use for the first time Tuesday of this week, was installed without the commission's approval or inspection.

He pointed out that the tremendous mass of the structure was too much

WATER DISTRICT DEBT REDUCTION MOVE CONFLICT

Wilson Says Claim Can Be Paid Out Of General City Funds—Opposition Opinion Expressed

Attorney E. Wilson, who formerly represented the Diamond Utility Water District in Bayshore City, expressed a legal opinion at a contnued meeting of the Bayshore council, Tuesday evening of this week, that the city could legitimately pay, using general funds, a claim which his law firm held against the district prior to the time the Diamond Utility virtually became a municipal system.

Wilson declared that his claim was parallel to expenditures for improvements or expansions of the water system, and that the city could lawfully satisfy it by either: (1) Levying a tax on the water district, or (2) Drawing from the general fund. "The city is responsible by inheritance for the claim," Wilson stated.

Mayor Lawson referred the matter to City Attorney Hoffman and said that the council would be governed by his recommendation.

Hoffman stated that some municipal attorneys do not agree with the opinion of Wilson. The city attorney expressed doubt in the possibility that the courts would hold that Bayshore should pay the claim out of general funds.

City Engineer Klassen and A. J. Taylor reported that meter change

WIDOW OF DUEL VICTIM DIES AT STATE HOSPITAL

Stone Monuments Mark Spot Where Last California Battle Of Honor Took Place

Report of the death, Monday of this week, of Sarah Althea Terry, 89, famous belle of early San Francisco days, in the Stockton State Hospital, recalled the historic duel between Judge David S. Terry and Senator David C. Broderick, which took place in 1859 not more than a mile from the present western boundaries of Daly City.

Another local angle concerning the life of Mrs. Terry was the famous court battle she waged, before her marriage to Judge Terry, for the estate of Senator William Sharon,

Sarah Althea Hill Terry

Peninsula and San Francisco multimillionaire, whose heirs still own a large part of the original tract in the foothills west of Menlo Park. She claimed that Senator Sharon had entered into a marriage contract.

The duel in which Senator Broderick was killed and Judge Terry was fatally injured took place in a ravine on the eastern shore of Lake Merced, about 200 feet south of the San Mateo-San Francisco County line. The dueling spot, marked by stone monuments, may be seen from the seventh tee of the San Francisco golf course.

Mrs. Terry had been confined in the Stockton hospital for more than 30 years. Almost to the end she retained the fragile beauty which had made her famous, and throughout the years in the hospital she dressed with all the fashionable frills of the glamorous era of the '80s.

Negro Giant Accused Of Boxcar Murder

Henry Shelton, 31, giant Negro gardener and country transcient with a long police record, stood indirectly accused, Wednesday of this week, of the Brisbane boxcar murder of Joseph Davis, 37, colored itinerant.

His accuser was Jake Edwards, 37, Negro laborer, who was arrested with Shelton in San Francisco after the pair had become involved in a quarrel with a Southern Pacific employe.

Edwards related to Sheriff James J. McGrath that on the week end of February 7, following a fight between Davis and another transient, Shelton struck Davis, then led him off to the boxcar.

A few minutes later, Edwards told the sheriff, Shelton rejoined the group around the campfire, saying grimly, "There will be no more trouble in this jungle."

Sheriff McGrath said he believed "we have the right man." He said Shelton is known to have a violent and vicious temper.

Shelton, not booked for murder, is being held for investigation, awaiting questioning by Sheriff McGrath and Undersheriff Lawrence Nieri.

GIRL KILLED IN AUTOMOBILE CRASH ON BAYSHORE HIGHWAY NEAR BONECOAL PLANT SUNDAY MORNING

Father Was Accident Victim Two Years Ago — Family Left Without Support

As a result of an automobile accident on Bayshore highway near the bonecoal plant, early Sunday morning of this week, a San Francisco girl was kiled and her companion held in the county jail at Redwood City on a charge of negligent homicide.

The second member of her family to die in a Bayshore highway collision, Josephine Schonbacher, 21, 2101 Revere avenue, San Francisco, was killed when an automobile driven by Joseph Stinson, 40, 2582 Third street, San Francisco, sideswiped the car of Clayton Clarkson, 35 Baywood avenue, San Mateo, according to police.

PASSING ON CURVE

Otto Schramm, acting highway patrol captain, said Stinson's automobile had swung out of its traffic lane on a curve and in pulling it back into the lane the rear end crashed into Clarkson's machine.

Miss Schonbacher's skull was crushed and she was pronounced dead on arrval at Mission Emergency Hosptal. Two years ago her father was killed in a collison at Bayshore and Army street in San Francisco.

With her husband's death, the widow fought bravely to bring up five children. Last week there was promise of brighter days as her oldest daughter secured an $18 a week job and became the chief support of the family.

Firemens Opening Dance A Success

The firemen's opening dance held in the new hall, Saturday evening of last week, was a genuine success. Many local people and their guests attended the affair.

"The new fire house is the realization of forward looking men," recently stated Fire Chief Schmidt. "The boys have co-operated well and worked hard to bulid for Brisbane a creditable department and a fine new hall in which to place the equipment and in which may be held social functions."

Daly City gave $340.25, South San Francisco $250, San Bruno $142.70, Bayshore $103.18, Lawndale $68, Colma $48, Brisbane $20.25, Rockaway, Pedro and Valemar $12 and Sharp Park, Brighton and Edgemar $10.

Vagabond Sketches

DANZIG, CITY OF THE NOT SO FREE—In spite of its title under the League of Nations, Free City of Danzig, the fact remains that the city is in constant fear of Germany, or rather Nazi invasion.

During the years just prior to the Great War, the most accurate shooting rifles in all Europe were made in Danzig.

The weapon had an extra long barrel, a tough stock and a capacity for five cartridges. It was similar to the American Springfield (war time) gun except it was far superior.

Since Danzig is a seaport town, near the iron and steel centers of Europe, and is of vast potential importance in the manufacture of arms, it would be well, for the maintenance of world peace, to see that it remain a free city.

Brisbane Tavern To Open Tonight

Dick's Tower, one of the finest taverns on the peninsula, will stage a gala opening tonight. A lively crowd of peninsula residents will be on hand for the party.

Dick Anglesay, proprietor of the Tower, designed and personally supervised the construction of his tavern. Expense or effort were not spared in preparation for the comfort and enjoyment of his patrons.

Brisbane Merchants Hold Banquet

The Brisbane Merchants Association held their second annual banquet at the Tourist Cafe, Sunday evening of this week. Members and guests deliverd short addresses on the progress of Brisbane and the part which the association plays in community life.

Toasts were given to business progress and to Dick Anglesay, whose new tavern opens tonight.

Members who attended the affair were Mr. and Mrs. C. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Mozetti, Tiny Burns, J. Mudersbach, Mr. and Mrs. G. Heywood, Al Boynton and Phil Sbriglia. Holdout Technique of Cards, Yankees Provides Contrast

THERE probably are other ways in which the business heads of baseball's two most efficient firms perform their daily chores. At this season, though, it is the manner in which they manipulate their holdouts that provides the most enlightening contrast.

Branch Rickey of the Cards is a prime exponent of the "let's raise hell before we sign the papers" school. Even when not blessed with such a gifted debating opponent as Dizzy Dean he is a firm believer in the benefits to be obtained from airing salary squabbles in press, news reels and any other available public forums.

Ed Barrow of the Yankees long has been convinced that unballyhooed negotiations provide the best results. Now and then—as during the later years of Ruth—Cousin Ed yields to the temptation of a fine fanfare of publicity during the weeks immediately preceding the signing of a contract. But the blather surrounding such yieldings only serves to convince him the more that regular methods are the best. Immediately thereafter he returns to the policy of offering a fair price.

But the fact that such high-salaried notables as Ruth and Dean usually are pretty close to a meeting of minds with the management before all parties start yelling in the papers—probably is the reason why few business managers take the winter furor seriously. Several big-time clubs are notorious for paying pitiful wages, but, in general, the average is high. So, because an Eddie Roush comes along very seldom, the magnates are happily fortified.

Dizzy Dean

Roush never could have proved his point as easily as a Hubbell, who might give evidence that the added customers at one Sunday game are sufficient to pay his annual salary. But Eddie knew he was worth $100,000.

Once he held out most of the summer before Cincinnati met his terms. At other times he may have remained away from spring training merely because the shifting sands of Texas and Florida did not agree with his aging dogs. But all the while he knew he was worth $100,000 and since the days of the lamented Chris von der Ahe no club-owner has been willing to sacrifice a sum merely to humor a stubborn whim. So Eddie got his way.

Apart from the Dean-Rickey advertisement and one or two other carryings-on of similar nature this winter's show of holdouts seems considerably below the usual ballyhoo par. Most of the boys—although as one who likes to see greedy and mismanaging owners clipped for extra dough now and then I make this statement sadly—seem to have as little heart in their demands as Hank Leiber did twelve months ago.

Public prints reported the big outfielder as threatening to coach baseball at Arizona university rather than sign the contract offered by the Giants. Hank is a valuable young player and, even though the Giants' terms seemed very decent, this is a world which favors a guy getting all he can.

In the midst of his most violent protestations he made one mistake, though. He kept writing to friends in New York asking how the Giants were reacting to his demands. This definitely revealed a chink in his armor. So, having heard the gossip which may or may not have reached Horace Stoneham's ears, I was not surprised to see Hank walk into a Pensacola hotel only a few days late.

Rocky Mountain basketball teams usually travel long distances in autos for their league games. Panhandle A. & M. recently finished a 450-mile auto trip and won a one-point victory. Last winter the Utah Aggies left for a 135-mile auto trip at 8 a. m. and didn't arrive until 9 p. m. because of snowdrifts, slides and cold weather. Then they climbed out of the cars, put on their uniforms and won by a big score to clinch the championship. The pioneer spirit still prevails. . . Only three members of the Hershey hockey team remain in the town during the off-season. Lloyd Blinco works as an assistant golf pro, while Audley K. (Tut) is an accountant with a college degree and Russ Russell keeps in trim in the lumber yard.

NOT IN THE BOX SCORE:

EARLY baseball odds make the Browns, Phillies and A's 200 to 1. . . Helen Jacobs, Peggy Scriven, Dorothy Round, Jesse Owens and most of the basketball stars bear out physicians' claims that most good athletes have flat feet. . Pedro Montanez, the Puerto Rican lightweight, wears bright red shoes while working out in the gym. . . Women played basketball almost as early as men In fact, they started one month after Dr. James Naismith invented the game in 1891. . . Mort Lindsay, captain of the Jack Dempsey team in the coming national ten-pin championships, has participated in 27 of the A. B. C. tournaments. . . The U. S. G. A., always whining about being mistreated in the papers, has a publicity department that is tops in nuisance value.

Gents who persist in saying that Joe Louis needs extra tape and bandages for his oversize paws, should take a look at the Bomber some time. Actually he has very small mitts for a heavyweight. . . One reason for Minnesota's gridiron success is that 9,000 candidates turned out for the university's intercollegiate and intramural athletic teams during 1936. Of these 400 were candidates for the frosh football team and 233 for the varsity. . . Rev. Reginald Ferrier is president of the American Mouse Fanciers' association, a new organization. . . Umpire Bill Dineen was surprised, and elated, to discover a big increase in his American league contract. . . Fourteen members of the 1936 Columbia varsity and junior varsity crews will be available again this year.

Hockey gossips say that the poor showing of the amateur Rovers is due to jealousy among the players. The boys remember inter-town and inter-sectional feuds in their native Canada and so team play is sacrificed in one of those "every man for his own self" scrambles. Russ Russell, Hershey wing, has not missed one of the more than 140 games played since he joined the B'ars. . . Lucien Gagnon, the Hershey goalie and a protege of the famed Georges Vezina, stopped 99 out of 100 shots while helping the Quebec Bears win the Allan Cup in 1932. . . Lester Patrick, manager of the Rangers, is one of the nation's best story tellers and can sing a bit, too.

Bill Terry's Son Won't Follow Dad's Footsteps

Bill Terry, manager of the Giants, has a son at the University of Virginia, who doesn't participate in athletics. . . Fred Frick, son of the National league president, confines his DePauw university sporting attention to golf.

Bill Terry

Joe Falcaro, former match game bowling champion, has a sixteen-year-old son whose footwork and other actions on the alleys are ringers for those of his old man. . . Hungary, England, Bohemia, Germany and Norway provided the ancestors for the members of Marquette's varsity basketball five. . . Al Barabas, who scored Columbia's Rose Bowl touchdown against Stanford, has given up the notion of being a lawyer. Instead he is selling accident insurance along with Ivan VanBree, former Colgate track captain.

A new combine from the West has joined Jack Pfeffer in an effort to oust Jack Curly from local wrestling, proving that some people never learn. . . Dr. Bier examined a fighter at Pompton Lakes the other day and asked him if he was suffering from amnesia. "I never touch it," declared the pug. . . . Gunboat Smith is head runner for a Wall Street house. . . Doctors keep telling Tony Canzoneri it will be a boy. . . Johnny Dundee never misses a local fight and thinks he can still beat most of the local scrappers. . . Aldo Spoldi is a regular Metropolitan Opera patron when not belting over lightweights. . . After delivering two knockouts in a row, Indian Quintana feels so much better that he will demand another chance at the bantamweight title-holder. . . One reason why Promoter Bill Johnston is topping all the 35-year-old records at St. Nicholas Palace is a very good press agent.

Members of the Kokomo high school basketball team became so indignant after losing five straight games that they demanded Coach Al Campbell change his methods. The coach merely told the boys not to come out to practice any more and awarded their uniforms to new candidates. . . Paul Mishler, Bloomington H. S. center, and Jim Butler, Decatur Central H. S. (both of Indiana), wear No. "00" on their basketball jerseys. But in spite of having plenty of nothing, they're both high scorers.

Jimmy Johnston, Jr., who took plenty of short-end dough on the Pastor-Louis battle, provides the following list of historic encounters where long-price layers walked the plank: Dave Shade vs. Jimmy Slattery, Willie Jackson vs. Johnny Dundee, Ace Hudkins vs. Ruby Goldstein, Billy Petrolle vs. Jimmy McLarnin, Jimmy McLarnin vs. Sid Terris, Tony Canzoneri vs. Jimmy McLarnin, Jim Braddock vs. Tuffy Griffiths, Jim Braddock vs. Baer. and Schmeling vs. Louis.

Mother of Our First President

THE girl who was to become the mother of George Washington was something of a belle in her native colony, Virginia. Mary Ball, descended from a good English family, was called "the rose of Epping Forest" in her girlhood, Epping Forest being the name of the Ball homestead. Orphaned early, she had as her guardian George Eskridge, a wealthy Virginia planter.

At twenty-two, Mary Ball married (on March 6, 1730) Augustine Washington, then a widower with two little boys. Her first child she named George after her old family friend. Five other children were born of this marriage, four of whom survived. When Augustine Washington died, she was left with a brood of youngsters to care for. George was then only eleven. Fortunately, however, states a writer in the Indianapolis News, the husband had provided for them amply.

George Washington was still a young boy when he became possessed of a great desire to be a midshipman. His mother had been half-hearted about this plan at all times, but finally (so the story goes) when his sea-chest was being carried down to the wharf by a porter, she refused to let him go. He accepted her decision with good grace, and devoted himself to surveying instead. His activities in the next years often took him far away from her and gradually prepared him for the great role he was to play in American history.

Mary Ball Washington was sixty-eight when the revolution began. Since communication was then so primitive, she often did not know for months at a time whether her son was alive or dead. Yet she maintained outward calm and courage. One of her sayings was, "The mothers and wives of brave men must be brave women." The members of her household knew, though, that every day she went off by herself with her Bible to a quiet spot called Meditation Rock.

At last Cornwallis surrendered in 1781 and the revolution was won. Ever mindful of his mother's anxiety for him, Washington sent off a courier at once to bear her the news.

Mary Ball Washington lived to be over eighty, mentally keen and unfailingly cheerful. She died in 1789, the year her son was elected first President of the United States.

Washington at 25

WHEN George Washington sat for this rare miniature, he was only twenty-five but he was already well on the way toward becoming Virginia's first citizen. His marriage to Martha, the wealthy widow of Daniel Custis, in 1759 and the death of his half brother, Lawrence, made George at twenty-nine perhaps the richest man in Virginia and certainly one of the richest in America. But before that—in his early twenties—he had made his mark as a soldier who could combine reckless courage with thoughtful purpose.

Multiplication Is the Way of Life and Love

We are all either stretching or shrinking. Our world, home, work, business is becoming bigger or less. None can stop still. A business that does not grow ceases to pay dividends; a shopkeeper that does not continue to get new customers may well shut shop. A man who does not accumulate ideas and visions is donning old age, however few years he has lived, for age is not a matter of years. The woman with no friends cannot live like the woman with a large circle of friends. By adding there is growth; but subtracting there is death and stagnation.

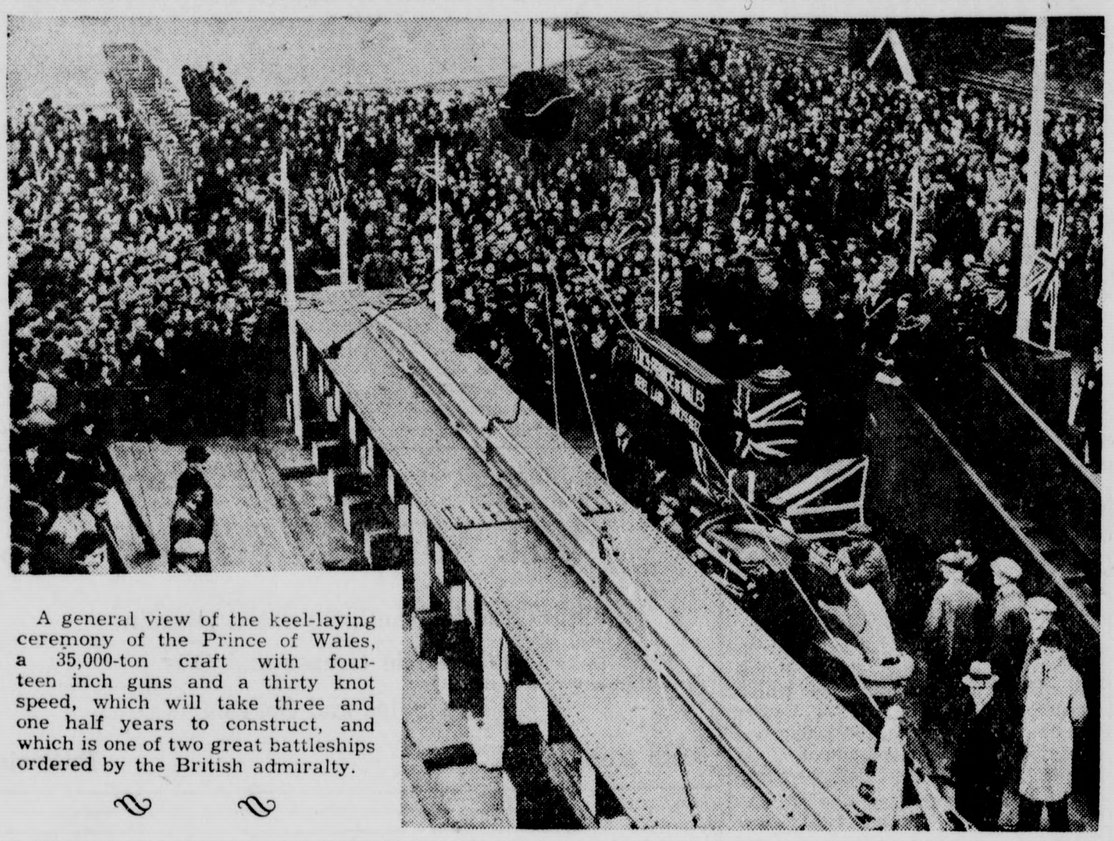
Laying the Keel of Britain's Big Battleship



A general view of the keel-laying ceremony of the Prince of Wales, a 35,000-ton craft with fourteen inch guns and a thirty knot speed, which will take three and one half years to construct, and which is one of two great battleships ordered by the British admiralty.

Bedtime Story for Children

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

BILLY MINK LIVES HIGH

BILLY MINK was living high. Yes, sir, Billy Mink was living high. For the first time in his life he didn't have to hunt for his meals. Whenever he became hungry all he had to do was to slip out from under the woodpile, and there was a meal waiting for him. Of course it hadn't taken Billy long to find out where those meals came from. After the first day Billy had watched. Peeping out from his hiding place under the wood he had seen the farmer come from the house and leave something for him to eat and then go on to feed the hens.

Sometimes Billy would find scraps of meat. Sometimes it would be fish. Once, when the farmer and his wife had had a chicken dinner, Billy had found a couple of chicken heads, of which he is very fond. Always it was something Billy liked. He was living so high that he was actually growing fat and lazy.

And as the days went on Billy grew less and less afraid of that farmer. He decided that no one who meant harm to him would be so good to him. So after a while Billy would come out in broad daylight. In fact, the farmer would have gone hardly ten steps away before Billy would be out to see what had been left for him. And the farmer took the greatest care not to do anything to frighten Billy. In short, Billy and the farmer were becoming very food friends.

Just for exercise Billy would occasionally run over to the big barn and hunt for mice. Once he visited the henhouse and found that there was no longer a trap there. Neither was there a hole by which he could get into that henhouse. The farmer had blocked up that hole through which Billy had once entered. After he discovered this Billy kept away from the henhouse. He knew that it was of no use to go there. You see, he is not like the rats; he doesn't gnaw holes. He makes use of holes some one else has made. His teeth are not made for gnawing.

But Billy wasn't especially disappointed because he couldn't get into the henhouse. In fact, he seldom thought about chickens. You see, he had plenty to eat, and, having plenty, there was no temptation to try to kill a chicken. So Billy felt very much at home and worried about nothing at all. There was nothing to worry about. He felt as if he quite belonged in that farmyard.

MOTHER'S COOK BOOK

NOODLES AND PUDDING

THOSE who enjoy noodles in various ways will find the following salad good and out of ordinary:

Noodle Ham Salad.

Take one cupful of egg noodles, one cupful of celery, two tablespoonfuls of chopped olives, one cup ful of boiled ham, one-half cupful of string beans, salt and mayonnaise or cooked dressing to taste. Cook the noodles broken into small pieces, until tender. Drain and chill, then add the remaining ingredients and season to taste. Serve on lettuce.

The following won the five hundred dollar prize for the best recipe using macaroni:

Lemon Surprise Pudding.

Cook one-half pound of macaroni until tender in rapidly boiling salted water. Drain and mix with the following ingredients: One cupful of milk, two apples peeled and sliced thin, three eggs beaten, one cupful of bread crumbs, one cupful of shredded coconut, three tablespoonfuls of grapenuts, one teaspoonful each of nutmeg, cinnamon and one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, three-fourths cupfuls of sugar and two teaspoonfuls of lemon juice. Put into a well-buttered baking dish and bake in a moderate oven until brown. Spread when done with lemon sauce, using the juice and rind of two lemons, three tablespoonfuls of cornstarch, one cupful of sugar, two cupfuls of boiling water and two eggs. Mix the dry ingredients, add to the water and cook slowly until thick, then add the remainder; beat until smooth. Spread this sauce over the top of the pudding and sprinkle thickly with the coconut.

Fruit sugars in both the uncooked fruits and in the jellies and marmalades are effective in furnishing an alkaline-ash reaction valuable to balance the acid-ash reaction of the cereal foods which play such an important part in the diet.

THE LANGUAGE OF YOUR HAND

By Leicester K. Davis

© Public Ledger, Inc.

LOVE is strange, indeed. In one we may find it shaped and expressed through a wish to make the world a better place to live in—love for our fellow man. In another it may be of more selfish kind—desire of the "one-man" woman or the "one-woman" man to center the affections upon a single individual.

In still another, it may be an overwhelming desire to love for love's own sake, sometimes unwisely and too well.

The thumb, if correctly analyzed, will usually indicate the kind of love the temperament is most likely to give and seek.

The Thumb of Responsive Love.

This thumb is always marked by resilient flexibility throughout its length. The entire thumb is gracefully proportioned, with evenly spaced first and second joints. The first joint is usually well tapered, rather fully fleshed on the side opposite the nail, and arched on the underside from the joint to the nail tip.

The second, or middle, joint is apt to be more curved than straight, although seldom pronounced in its slenderness. The third, or palm, joint is always much rounded and inclined to over-plumpness, this being accentuated when the thumb is pressed close to the edge of the hand. With the hand extended wide, the thumb stands out from the hand, sometimes almost at right angles to the palm.

All things being equal, a thumb with these characteristics is sure to indicate an extremely affectionate nature, one that is ardent though well controlled in matters of the heart, and generous to a fault where loved ones are concerned.

You Who Have Youth

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THOSE who have this have more than all else own
Who have it not, whatever wealth is theirs.
Those who have youth can face the years unknown
With time enough to solve their sudden cares.
How often, in the midst of many men,
Some great assemblage I am told to scan
And name the richest. That is easy then—
I need but ask, "Which is the youngest man?"

You who have youth, and yet of youth complain,
Ask of your elders, they who tire so soon,
If they could choose, what they would choose to gain?
Then noon would ask for morning, night for noon.
The old ask not for rest, they ask for this:
Strength for the struggle, time to see it through.
Ask of the old the thing that most they miss
And you will learn how much they envy you.

I sat between two men whose hair was gray:
The one was Riches, and the other Fame,
And Failure sat a little space away,
And yet all three made answer, made the same.
Fame had his crown, and Riches had his gold,
And even Failure consciousness of truth,
Yet all they had for one thing would have sold—
Yes, traded all with you, you who have youth.

KNOW THYSELF

by Dr. George D. Greer

If You Can't Remember Something, Are You More Likely to Recall It If You Concentrate on It, or If You Forget It for Awhile?

STRANGELY enough, it seems to make matters worse when we try to force ourselves to recall some thing that is "gone" for the time being. We scratch our heads, think hard, but nothing comes. We would recall the thing much sooner and more certainly if we would dismiss it from our minds for awhile, then return to it later. Dr. Knight Dunlap, in his book, "Habits," goes so far as to say that any real effort at recalling something actually delays the return of the forgotten thing to our minds, and, in addition, produces bad effects upon our minds themselves.

Lovely Dinner Gown

Wine-colored lace and pale raspberry morganza are skillfully combined in this beautiful dinner gown. Rows of stitching trim the bands of lace at the neck and waist.

Incentives Merely Help

No incentives that can secure continual right-doing should be despised; for it is only as the life and character become exalted that exalted motives become possible. On the other hand, we should ever regard lower motives as the steps of a ladder by which we mount to some eminence, each one of which, useful and necessary in its turn, is gladly left for the one above it.

We've a Date to Sew!

OH GRACE, before you go—you're not in a hurry, are you—notice Mabel's slip.

Isn't that the one that you were telling the girls about at the Bid-Or-Bi club last week, Mabel?

Yes, it's my Sew-Your-Own and I'm real proud of it because it fits so smoothly. There's no bunchiness at the waistline or hips—it's fitted, you see—and yet there's lots of room around the bottom. And do you know how long it took me to make it—no self praise, but exactly two hours by the clock. I simply followed the pattern's instruction chart—as easy to do as to concoct a new dessert.

Tie, Buttons, Hat to Match.

It would be grand for a tailored dress like mine, wouldn't it, Mabel?

Just the thing! Are you off to the Civic League luncheon at the Hall? Your dress made up beautifully in that aquamarine, Grace. I'm crazy about it. The yoke-and-sleeves-in-one idea is swell and the black tie and buttons to match your hat make you look like Mrs. Merriweather herself.

Now, now, cut the rave. You know that neat-but-not-gaudy is my motto. Bye, I'll see you in print.

So long . . . Anne, since you like my slip so much, I'll be glad to help you make one like it, if you want me to.

That's lovely of you, Mabel, but would that sort of thing be right for a "Stylish Stout" like me? You should hear George when I call myself a "Stylish Stout." He says I flatter myself.

That Slenderizing Effect.

Leave it to the men! This slip would be especially good for you, Anne, because it's fitted and, George or no George, you look stylish in that dress you're wearing—but you DON'T look stout. The panel in front breaks the skirt line, and the jabot and collar do wonders for the "Buzzum." It would be grand made up in a flowered print for Spring, Anne.

That very idea occurred to me. Why don't we get together tomorrow afternoon and sew—are you game? Come to my house. I baked a batch of oatmeal cookies today.

It's a date, Anne, I'll be over in the morning as soon as the kids are off to school.

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure.

When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.

Frequent, scanty or burning passages may be further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance.

The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

POINT SAN PEDRO ROCKAWAY BEACH

Actvity in building and remodeling is observable in the coastside region now. Following close upon the gala opening of the Bob Scott place, come rumors of others nearby. One that has long hung in the wind, due to insurmountable obstacles of weather and the strike, is soon to be hustled to completion at Pedro, where its proximity to the new highway will make its presence favorably known to travelers, as well as to local residents.

All this, however, is in the future. Present improvements include Mrs. Wadorf's nearly finished house, paneled and lined last week, lights installed, bathroom, kitchen, porch and other improvements completed. The Neilsons are planning an additional room to their pretty house, for the use of Bill, their son. The Remmers are continually beautifying their home, and the new Payzok house is still being worked over by the two brothers, for the pleasure and convenience of the future Mrs. Payzok. The Glovers have torn down the tiny, picturesque shack that served them and their family of boys and girls last summer. Their new house is expanding into a sizeable affair with many wide windows to let the scenery in.

Much of the energy that might have been used for local improvement was diverted to remedy the damage done by the terrific storm of the past two weeks. Here in Pedro chimneys toppled and went down, roof coverings were ripped off, rain sweled springs poured their torrents forth, unseating several supposedly secure constructions, that included at least one septic tank that was wrenched from its moorings and left floating like a chip in a pond.

The Olmo chimney broke loose, and Pat Dempsey, chancing to see it beginning to lean over, ran to the rescue in the fury of the gale. He climbed to the roof and made the chimney fast again. Also—be it gratefully recorded!—he saved the roof of a nearby neighbor from being blown out to sea, by nailing planks over the parts already torn.

Again, Pat made Hermie Bryant's chimney behave when it started dancing a fandango in the wind.

The Beeler home lost some of its roof. After all, it looks as if there should be a vote of thanks to this good neighbor, Pat.

Clyde Garner, his mother and several guests came down, Sunday of this week, to see what damage the storm had done. They found everything snug and unharmed; the roof on tight and the brick chimney still standing.

The week end brought a beautiful, shining day to Shelter Cove, and many of the old time friends of that lovely spot came down to visit and enjoy the bracing air and the splendid scenery. Not a "rarin' to bo," but "rarin' to stay," was the motto of their mood, as they regretfully prepared to return to town after sunset.

Mrs. Peter Haugaard has just returned from a visit to her mother, Mrs. Small of Glen Ellen.

Rumor whispers that the Dempsey property is to be disposed of, and there's a sign up to prove it. We hope this does not mean that the Dempseys are leaving Pedro. They have made good friends here, and we'd like to see sturdy little Pat Jr. grow up in the healthful air of the hill.

Menlo Park Man Named Welfare Head

Launching reorganization of the Social Welfare Division of the San Mateo County Department of Health and Welfare, Dr. Charles C. Gans, director, recently named Adrian F. Ward, prominent Menlo Park civic leader and nationally experienced welfare worker, as superintendent of the welfare division.

Appointment of Ward becomes effective immediately. He took over the duties of superintendent, releiving Miss O. Pearl McCormick, acting head of the division since the retirement of Joseph Walker, Miss McCormick will resume her former post of case worker for the division.

In announcing the appointment of Ward, Dr. Gans said he selected the Menlo Park man for his wide experience as a welfare supervisor and administrator. Ward was chosen, he said, from a number of applicants for the post, and will have a free hand in reorganizing the welfare division.

Two Members of J. C. Board May Resign

There is a possibility that two members of the San Mateo Junior College Board of Trustees will resign their posts in June, when their terms of office expire. Mrs. L. G. Owen and possibly F T. Letchfield are the members who may leave their posts.

A desire to give the Jefferson Union High School and Half Moon Bay High School Districts, recently annexed to the J. C. district, representation on the college board promoted the probable shifts.

Early beginning of work on the first unit of the new junior college plant was forecast as the board authorized Mrs. Owen, clerk, to set a date for a joint meeting with associates of the late George W. Kelham, architect for the science building, first unit set for construction.

overs from the old to new system of pipes in the Diamond District have been made on two blocks of the south side of MacDonald avenue and one-half bock on the north side.

Fire hydrants have been connected and are served with 70 pounds of water pressure.

RED CROSS

The council voted $50 to be given to the Red Cross for flood relief. Other Bayshore organizations which contributed were the P. T. A., Voters League, Protective Association, fire department, police department, Good Ladies Club and Good Fellows Club.

The street committee was authorized to contact Youdell Utah Construction Company and arrange for the repair of sidewalk surface on Allen street which was damaged by the Youdell contractors when they laid heavy pipe through that area three months ago.

City Attorney Hoffman and Engineer Klassen were ordered by motion to send a letter to federal engineers, in charge of construction at the agricultural palace, requesting that immediate action be taken to dispose of the surface water which runs off the agricultural grounds and floods Rio Verde street. The water brings with it sand and debris which is deposited on the city thoroughfare. Residents of the area also complain their houses are damaged by the flood waters.

Two Are Injured In Lawndale Crash

One man was critically hurt and another seriously injured in a rear-end collision, early this week, on El Camino Real at Lawndale.

Michael Brady, 22, unemployed and address unknown, was the more seriously, receiving a severe scalp cut, broken leg and internal hurts.

Brady was riding wth Armand Krueger, 19, San Mateo, when Krueger's car smashed into the rear end of a truck. Krueger received a broken arm and severed muscles in his elbow.

Stomach Gas So Bad Seems To Hurt Heart

SYNOPSIS

Philo Vance, famous detective, and John F. X. Markham, district attorney for New York county are dining in Vance's apartment when Vance receives an anonymous telephone message informing him of a "disturbing psychological tension at Professor Ephriam Garden's apartment" advising that he read up on radio-active sodium, consult a passage in the Aeneid and counseling that "Equanimity is essential." Professor Garden is famous in chemical research. The message, decoded by Vance, reminds him that Professor Garden's son Floyd and his puny cousin, Woode Swift, are addicted to horse-racing. Vance says that "Equanimity" is a horse running next day in the Rivermont handicap. Vance is convinced that the message was sent by Dr. Siefert, the Gardens' family physician. He arranges to have lunch next day at the Gardens' penthouse. Vance is greeted by Floyd Garden and meets Lowe Hammle, an elderly follower of horse racing. Floyd expresses concern over Swift's queer actions. Mrs. Garden, supposedly ill, comes downstairs and places a $100 bet on a horse. Gathered around an elaborate loud speaker service, listening to the racing are Cecil Kroon, Madge Weatherby and Zalia Graem, who bet varying amounts on the race. There is tension under the surface gaiety. Zalia and Swift are not on speaking terms. Kroon leaves to keep an appointment before the race starts. Miss Beeton, a nurse, and Vance bet on "Azure Star." Swift recklessly bets $10,000 on "Equanimity" and goes to the roof garden to hear the results. Floyd follows Swift, remaining away several minutes. Kroon leaves to keep an appointment before the race starts. Zalia answers a telephone call in the den. A short time after the announcement that "Azure Star" wins, the guests hear a shot. Vance finds Swift dead, shot through the head with a revolver nearby. He says Swift has been murdered. After calling the police, he finds the door of a vault ajar.

"No!" Kroon sucked in his breath with a whistling sound, and his eyes slowly contracted. "So he shot himself, did he?"

Vance's eyebrows went up slightly.

"That's the general impression," he returned blandly. "You're not psychic—are you? I didn't mention how Swift died, but the fact is, he did die by a revolver shot. Superficially, I admit, it looks like suicide." Vance smiled coldly. "Your reaction is most interestin'. Why, for instance did you assume that he shot himself, instead of—let us say—jumping off the roof?"

Kroon set his mouth in a straight line, and a look of anger came into his narrowed eyes. He fumbled in his pocket for a cigarette, and finally stammered:

"I don't know—exactly . . . except that—most people shoot themselves nowadays."

"Oh, quite." Vance's lips were still set in a stern smile. "Not an uncommon way of assisting oneself out of this troublous world. But, really y'know, I didn't mention suicide at all. Why do you take it for granted that his death was self-inflicted?"

Kroon became aggressive. "He was healthy enough when I left here. No one's going to blow a man's brains out in public like this."

"Blow his brains out?" Vance repeated. "How do you know he wasn't shot through the heart?"

Kroon was now obviously flustered.

"I—I merely assumed—"

Vance interrupted the man's embarrassment.

"However," he said, without relaxing his calculating scrutiny, "your academic conclusions regarding a more or less public murder are not without some logic. But the fact remains, some one did actually shoot Swift through the head—and practically in public. I could bear to know just where you've been and just when you returned to the apartment house here."

Kroon's gaze wandered.

"I believe I remarked before I went out," he said, with an attempt at serenity, "that I was going to a relative's to sign some silly legal documents—"

"And may I have the name and address of your relative—an aunt, I believe you said?" Vance requested pleasantly. "I'm in charge of the situation here until the officials arrive."

Kroon took the cigarette from his mouth with a forced air of nonchalance and drew himself up haughtily.

"I cannot see," he replied stiffly, "that that information concerns any one but myself."

"Neither can I," admitted Vance cheerfully. "I was merely hopin' for frankness. But I can assure you, in view of what has happened here this afternoon, that the police will want to know exactly when you returned from your mysterious signing of documents. And now I must ask you to join the others in the drawing-room, and to wait there until the police arrive. I trust you have no objections."

"None whatever, I assure you," Kroon returned with a display of cynical amusement. "The regular police will be a relief, after this amateur hocus pocus."

When Kroon had disappeared into the drawing room, Vance went immediately to the front door, opened it quietly and, walking down the narrow public corridor, pressed the elevator button. A few moments later the sliding door opened and a dark, thin, intelligent-looking boy of perhaps twenty-two, in a light-blue uniform, looked out enquiringly.

"Going down?" he said respectfully.

"I'm not going down," Vance replied. "I merely wanted to ask you a question or two. I'm more or less connected with the district attorney's office."

"I know you, Mr. Vance." The boy nodded alertly.

"A little matter has come up this afternoon," Vance said, "and I think you may be able to help me . . ."

"I'll tell you anything I know," agreed the boy.

"Excellent! Do you know a Mr. Kroon who visits the Garden apartment?—The gentleman is blond and has a mustache."

"Sure, I know him," the boy returned promptly. "He comes up here nearly every afternoon. I brought him up today."

"About what time was that?"

"Two or three o'clock, I guess." The boy frowned. "Isn't he in there?"

Vance answered the question by asking another.

"Have you been on the car all afternoon?"

"Sure I have—since noon. I don't get relieved till seven o'clock."

"And you haven't seen Mr. Kroon since you brought him up here early this afternoon?"

The boy shook his head. "No, sir; I haven't."

"Many thanks," he said. "That's all I wanted to know."

The boy pocketed the money and released the door as we turned back to the apartment.

When we re-entered the front hall, the nurse was standing in the doorway of the bedroom at the right of the entrance. There was a worried, inquisitive look in her eyes.

Vance closed the door softly and was about to start up the hall, but he hesitated and turned toward the girl.

"You look troubled, Miss Beeton," he said kindly. "But, after all, you should be accustomed to death."

"I am accustomed to it," she answered in a low voice. "But this is so different. It came so suddenly—without any warning . . . Although," she added, "Mr. Swift always impressed me as more or less the suicidal type."

Vance looked at the nurse appraisingly. "Your impression may have been correct," he said. "But it happens that Swift did not commit suicide."

"I Say, Stop This Nonsense," He Admonished Her Sternly.

The nurse's eyes opened wide. Her face paled perceptibly.

"You mean someone shot him?" Her words were barely audible. "But who—who——?"

"We don't know." Vance's voice was matter-of-fact. "But we must find that out . . . Would you like to help me, Miss Beeton?"

She drew herself up; her features relaxed; and she was once more the unperturbed and efficient nurse.

"I'd be very glad to."

"Then I would like you to stand guard, as it were," he said, with a faint friendly smile. "I want to talk to Mr. Garden, and I don't want anyone to go upstairs. Would you mind taking your post in this chair and notifying me immediately if anyone should attempt to go up?"

"That's so little to ask," the girl replied, as she seated herself in a chair at the foot of the stairs.

Vance thanked her and proceeded to the den. Inside Garden and Zalia Graem were sitting close together on a tapestry davenport and talking in low, confidential tones. An indistinct murmur of voices from beyond the archway indicated that the other members of the group were in the drawing-room.

"I've called the district attorney, and he has notified the police. They should be here any minute now. In the meantime, I'd like to see you alone." He turned his head to Miss Graem and added: "I hope you won't mind."

The girl stood up and arched her eyebrows.

"Pray, don't consider me," she replied. "You may be as mysterious as you wish."

Garden rebuked her peevishly.

"Never mind the hauteur, Zalia." Then he turned to Vance. "Why didn't you ring the buzzer for me? I would have come up. I purposely stayed here in the den because I thought you might be wanting me."

"I did ring, don't y' know," Vance told him.

"Twice, in fact. But as you didn't come up, I came down."

"There was no signal here," Garden assured him. "And I've been right here ever since I came downstairs."

"I can vouch for that," put in Miss Graem.

"I'm dashed grateful for the corroboration," Vance murmured.

"Are you sure you pressed the button?" Garden asked Vance. "It's damned funny. That system hasn't failed in six years. Wait a minute . . ."

Going to the door he called Sneed.

"Go upstairs to the study, Sneed," Garden ordered, "and push the buzzer button."

"The buzzer is out of order, sir," the butler told him imperturbably. "I've already notified the telephone company."

"When did you know about it?" Garden demanded angrily.

The nurse, who had heard the conversation, left her chair and came to the doorway.

"I discovered this afternoon that the buzzer wasn't working," she explained; "so I told Sneed about it and suggested that he notify the telephone company."

"Oh, I see. Thank you, Miss Beeton." Garden turned back to Vance. "Shall we go upstairs now?"

Miss Graem, who had been looking on with a cynical and somewhat amused expression, started from the room.

"Why go upstairs?" she asked. "I'll fade into the drawing room, and you can talk to your heart's content right here."

Vance studied the girl for a few seconds, and then bowed slightly.

"Thank you," he said. "That will be much better." He stood aside as she strolled leisurely into the hall and closed the door after her.

Vance dropped his cigarette into a small ash tray on the tabouret before the davenport and, moving swiftly to the door, reopened it. From where I stood in the den, I could see that Miss Graem, instead of going toward the drawing room, was walking rapidly in the opposite direction.

"Just a moment, Miss Graem!" Vance's voice was peremptory. "Please wait in the drawing-room. No one is to go upstairs just now."

She swung about. "And why not?" Her face was flushed with anger, and her jaw protruded with defiance. "I have a right to go up," she proclaimed spiritedly.

Vance said nothing but shook his head in negation, his eyes holding hers.

She returned his look, but could not resist the power of his scrutiny. Slowly she came back toward him. A sudden change seemed to have come over her. Her eyes dimmed, and tears sprang into them.

"But you don't understand," she protested, in a broken voice. "I'm to blame for this tragedy—it wasn't the race. If it hadn't been for me Woody would be alive now. I—I feel terrible about it. And I wanted to go upstairs—to see him."

Vance put his hand on the girl's shoulder.

"Really," he said softly, "there's nothing to indicate that you're to blame."

Zalia Graem looked up at Vance searchingly.

"Then what Floyd has been trying to tell me is true—that Woody didn't shoot himself?"

"Quite true," said Vance.

The girl drew a deep breath, and her lips trembled. She took a quick impulsive step toward Vance, and resting her head against his arm, burst into tears.

Vance placed his hands on her arms and held her away from him.

"I say, stop this nonsense," he admonished her sternly. "And don't try to be so deuced clever. Run along to the drawing room."

Soon Mrs. Garden came through the archway with a look of resentful determination, and strode aggressively down the hall.

"Zalia has just told me," she sad angrily, "that you forbade her to go upstairs. It's an outrage! But surely I may go up. This is my house, remember. You have no right whatever to prevent me from spending these last minutes with my nephew."

Vance turned to confront her. There was a pained look on his face, but his eyes were cold and stern.

"I have every right, madam," he said. "The situation is a most serious one, and if you will not accept that fact, it will be necessary for me to assume sufficient authority to compel you to do so."

The woman raised her eyebrows, shrugged her shoulders, and, turning indifferently, went back up the hall.

"Frightfully sorry, Vance," apologized Garden.

"The mater is a dowager. Not accustomed to taking orders. And she resents it. She'd probably have spent the day in bed, if Doc Siefert hadn't firmly told her not to get up."

"That's quite all right." Vance spoke indifferently. Then he came quickly to the den door. "Let's have our little chat—eh, what?" He stood aside for Garden to enter the room, then he followed and closed the door.

COLLEGE PLAY

The antiwar play, "Bury the Dead," by Irwin Shaw has been selected as the term production by the San Mateo Junior College. Extensive settings and a cast of 20 men and six women make the play additionally unusual for the college players.

Tryouts are being held this week, and rehearsals will start as soon as casting is finished.

for the safety net, built to withstand 400 pounds pressure at one point.

The wooden structure, with its human cargo, plummeted into the safety nets thirty-five feet below, ripping the nets like tape from a spool and cheating their life saving purpose.

The first body recovered was identified as that of Fred G. Dummitzen, 224 Downey street, laborer.

Those rescued from the bay were Oscar Osberg, foreman of the stripping crew, and E. C. Lambert, laborer.

Scene of the accident was in dead center of the bridge.

A fishing boat, passing under the bridge at the time of the crash, was the first to reach the men in the water.

It put into Fort Point life saving station with three victims aboard, one dead.

Coast guard boats from the life saving station immediately put out to search for the other workmen in the strong running tide.

While six boats combed the waters for the missing victims, airplanes roared over the scene in a search from the air.

It was feared that the missing men, killed or badly injured in the precipitous drop, might have been entangled in the steel mesh of the safety net.
